

Too Many Eggs

Comedic monologue by Samuel Stokes

About 8 months ago, I thought it would be a great idea to raise hens. I mean, what's not to love about free eggs, right? So, I bought a dozen baby chicks from the farm supply store and brought them home. They were so cute, and I got them a little kennel to put them in, and a heat lamp and pine bedding and chicken feed.

Little by little they grew until they were too big for the little kennel, so I had to go back to the store and buy a coop and run so they would have some room to move around and a place to lay eggs. I'm now buying feed in large bags and they're tearing right through it.

After about six months, they finally started laying eggs! At first, I was finding one or two a day, then five or six, and now it's ten to twelve! Unfortunately, I forgot one thing – I don't really eat eggs all that often!

So, I had to start learning new ways to cook them, frying, hard boiling, soft boiling, poaching, hard scrambling, soft scrambling, over easy, over medium, over hard, and you can make omelets and frittatas and quiche. I'm now making eggs for every meal and I still have too many eggs! I even had to start drinking them raw like Rocky!

Oh well, I figured, at least I'm saving tons of money, right? I've only spent slightly over $2000 dollars now and I've produced about, uh, let's see, about $57 worth of eggs. Yeah.....

So, anyone want to buy some eggs?
